Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

I have a 2004 GMC Yukon that stays parked outside year-round. I don't drive it a lot, maybe every three weeks or so to get groceries and such. In the summer it is fine but in the colder months the battery goes dead every time I need it, and I've had to replace the battery at least every year. I also need to get it started on the coldest of days and even with the good battery it sometimes does not want to go. Do you have any suggestions for a more reliable starting?

Thank you, Joyce in Redwood Falls Minnesota.

Dear Joyce,

We have a number of listeners who are in this situation, and we also have a vehicle stored outdoors that we use rarely but when it is needed it must run quickly. We always keep a battery maintainer on the vehicle when it is not being used. It uses only a few cents per day to keep the vehicle battery ready to go at a moment's notice and it has never failed to have enough power to turn it over. As for the very cold weather. We have installed a block heater that we only plug in for a few hours before we needed it and only on the coldest days. Most days the strong fully charged battery is enough to do the trick. We also always keep fuel stabilizer in it due to low vehicle usage.

Take care, the Motor Medics.

Dear Motor Medics,

I have a question about tires and how well they grip. I have always used all-season tires since I live where it snows, and I want good grip all year. The guys at the tire store have always said that's all I need but recently my mechanic said that if I switch to a winter tire in the cold months, I will get a much better grip. Is there really a difference in winter tires and all-season tires.

Thank you, Jerome in Fargo North Dakota.

Dear Jerome,

There is a major difference in tires. There is more to a tire than just the tread you see. Sometimes people will look at a tire and choose the one with the most aggressive tread to get the best grip. In fact, a very aggressive tread is better on mud and in deep snow but for packed snow and ice, the tire type with a tread that is closer to a street tire but with more grooves cut in the tires or "Siping" gives the tire a much better grip. The more siping that a tire has, the more surface area the tire has to contact the road. There is also a major difference in the rubber of a winter tire than a summer tire. Rubber gets harder when colder and the harder the tire the less grip it has. Your mechanic is correct. Using a winter only tire will give you a better grip and keep you safer.

Take care, the Motor Medics.
