Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

I have a two-part question with two cars. I have a 2025 Ford Maverick, and a 2025 Tesla Model S. My questions are about the first-time maintenance needed on these cars. The Maverick is a hybrid and I was told to do the first oil change at 10k miles. This came directly from the dealer as this car was brand new. After that it's also looking like 10k between oil changes which were included in my service plan. I just don't feel right going that long and they don't cover anything on the car after 36k so what would they need me to maintain it better. Does it hurt to change it a lot sooner? On the Tesla, is there anything I need to change as far as fluids on a regular basis?

Thank you, Dan in Michigan.

Dear Dan,

We see some cars coming with a break in oil which is intended to go a longer distance to seat the rings and pistons to prevent oil burning but we are still undecided as to the 10k thing or not. We go 5k on our remanufactured units we install at our shop. Either way, after the first change we go to a much earlier change, usually 3mo or 3k miles but with a full synthetic we sometimes go 5k. You need to talk to your local mechanic to come up with a plan. On the Tesla we are not aware of any fluid changes needed right away.

Take care, the Motor Medics.

Dear Motor Medics,

I want to upgrade my radio and my remote start in my 2021 GMC Yukon. The remove start has a very limited distance for starting range and the radio does not have enough bass for me. What kind of suggestions do you have without paying for a subscription for the remote start app on my phone.

Thank you, Donald in Worthington Minnesota.

Dear Donald,

You got me there. The first thing I was going to suggest was getting a subscription for your phone but if you are like me you don't want to pay that monthly fee. You can get a longer-range remote start installed at aftermarket car stereo shops. They can safely tap into the factory systems and get you a very long-range unit which you can customize to run for more than the factory set ten minutes too. The units even have a temp reading on the remote in many cases so that you can tell how warm or cool the interior is so you don't need to run it any longer than needed. As for the bass in the factory stereo system you have many choices for aftermarket equipment that will easily connect to the factory system. A lot of people add a subwoofer in the cargo area tied to the factory system and that will add as much bass as you want. All you must do is decide what your budget is. The bigger the louder with Bass.

Take care, the Motor Medics.
