Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,
I just bought a 2010 Ford Explorer and it's the first 4x4 I've owned that has electric shift on the dash instead of the floor. I'm more of a manual shift kind of guy but now that I'm a bit older, I've traded the full size F350 for something a bit smaller. It was the wife... She made me do it. My question is how well do the electric shift units work? It just seems like it would be weaker in my opinion, and I have yet to be able to get it to shift into 4x4 low range. It didn't come with a manual but how hard can it be? Just push the 4x4 button, or am I missing something? Love the Under The Hood show guys!

Ray in Lykens Pennsylvania

Dear Ray
Sorry about your loss, the big truck that is, but that Explorer is also a good rig. The electric 4x4 has been around for many years and it's just the shifting mechanism that's electric. Kind of like remote control if you want to think of it that way. Just select what you want like on the TV and that's what you get. To engage the low function, it is a bit more involved. While this one can go into 4x4 high while on the highway the low needs to be parked, in neutral and foot on the brake. If that won't work, it's off to the repair shop.

Take care, the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,
Guys, I'm having a problem with my wheels on my Chrysler 300 leaking air on a daily basis. I lose around 5 pounds of pressure almost daily and it has been annoying going to the store everyday to put air in them. I've tried going to the tire store 4 times where they looked for leaks and found none. On the fourth trip they suggested taking off the tires, cleaning the bead and sealing them with glue for tires which should fix any leaks I could have. they also replaced all 4 valve stems. Guess what, it didn't fix a thing. What could be leaking? the tires only have 10k miles on them and look perfect.

Troy in Scotts Bluff Nebraska

Dear Troy,
Welcome to the leaky wheel club. If they've checked all the items you have listed then it only leaves the wheels. While a wheel may look good it can become very porous with age and that can lead to leakage. And when we say leakage, we mean right through the actual surface of the wheel on all areas not just the tire sealing surface. While you can't see it, there are microscopic pores in the wheel that you could see under a very high-power microscope. To the air it might as well be a screen door. The only fix we have ever seen is a set of new or used replacement wheels once this has occurred.

Take care, the Motor Medics

Coming in tomorrow's

BRANDON VALLEY Journal

Brandon is on its way to becoming a two-grocery store town. Fareway Stores held their formal groundbreaking last week, and the Journal brings you the details from the first shovel of dirt moving on city's west-side.

Christmas came early for the Marching Lynx! Find out about the amazing gift of music the Brandon Valley High School band program received last week.

How tall can the grass grow before it's too tall? That was the discussion Brandon's Planning & Zoning Commission had at their Sept. 17 meeting. Learn about the outcome of that discussion in this week's Journal.

Realtor Lee Schelling teamed up with Northwest Tire in Brandon to give teen drivers the knowledge they need to keep their wheels rolling.

Another Brandon Valley Homecoming is in the books, and the Journal was front and center for the week-long party. Check out our celebratory photos from coronation all the way to Friday's football game.

Speaking of football, we've got reports from every sports team competing last week, and a recap of how the Marching Lynx fared in their first two competitions of the season.

So, grab a cup of coffee, find a comfy chair and settle in for a wealth of community news, sports and features that's all about you. And if you're that person who's constantly asking, "I wonder what's going on . . ." it's surely time to subscribe to the Brandon Valley Journal! Give us a call at (605) 582-9999 to subscribe today so you, too, can be in the know.
