Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

I purchased a 2016 Buick Lacross a couple years back with 30k miles on it. The car was out of warranty and was a low mileage used car purchase with a 100-point pre purchase inspection. Starting just 3 days after we purchased the car, multiple dash warning lights have appeared. ABS, Trac, Check engine, Air bag and more. We have taken the car back 8 times for different electrical repairs and are wondering about two things. First, could it be a flood car? It was purchased just after a hurricane in the area we bought it and two is there a lemon law that covers so many repairs?

Thank you, Denver in Kilgore Texas.

Dear Denver,

Flood damage can happen, but it is rarer than you think. We have not seen a car in our shop that has had signs of flood damage in more than ten years, and we specialize in weird electrical issues so we would be likely to see them if they were out in the market. You can check for water damage by pulling up the carpet and looking in hidden areas for rusting and dirty water stains. No, about lemon laws. Each state either has them or not but they are likely not what you think. Investigate your Texas laws to see what they may cover and make sure you have every receipt for repairs detailing exactly what was done and how many times. You may just have multiple issues caused by one common item.

Take care, the Motor Medics.

Dear Motor Medics,

Winter is coming and I'm new to a car with anti-lock brakes. We purchased a 2020 Chevy Equinox as a replacement of our 1990 Chevy we bought new and wore out. There are so many confusing things about anti-lock brakes we want to make sure we know what to do.

Thank you, Barbera in Sioux City Iowa.

Dear Barbera,

Anti-lock brakes are great but with all safety items if not used properly they can cause things to be less safe. For instance, never pump the brakes when you have anti-lock brakes. The brakes are computerized and controlled by the module and pumping the brakes causes improper operation. When you are on a low traction surface and apply the brakes, you will hear the pump run and the pedal will pulsate. This is normal. Hold steady pressure on the pedal while slowing down until you reach your desired speed. The anti-lock brakes can also help you steer through an obstacle if they are used properly. We strongly suggest that you take the vehicle to a wide-open parking lot when it is icy where you won't hit anything and practice driving and using anti-lock brakes. Get some cones and set them out and try to steer around them with the anti-lock brakes applied. With some practice you should start to feel more comfortable with them but remember you still need to make all safety decisions.

Take care, the Motor Medics.
